

I would like to voice my interest in maintaining some polyphony in the media. The interest of communication businesses is making money, not informing the consuming public. If a large region and population receives news and information from only one company, with profit and not social service as the motivation, that population stands to be misinformed or underinformed on important issues which affect the business interests of that company. Commercially biased media creates a misinformed public, a danger to themselves and the rest of the population. Thank you for your time. Jesse Sell
